

Skills, Strengths, and Interests Self-Assessment Worksheet

This worksheet supports your Career Action Planning process and is designed to help you create a comprehensive list of the skills and strengths you have developed prior to and during your time at Northeastern. Your skills and strengths are the assets you can leverage as you grow and advance professionally. You will apply this knowledge of your skills and strengths as you select your career path, search for a job, develop your resume, and interview for specific positions.

Instructions

Use the blank pages to document the skills, strengths, and interests you have acquired and demonstrated in different volunteer, academic, or professional settings. Please note that the lists provided here are of example skills and strengths lists included to help you brainstorm, please also consider skills and strengths that are not on these lists. You can also refer to course descriptions for prompts and ideas.

What is the difference between skills and strengths?

Skills are abilities that come from specific training and can be learned in a course, workshop, or self-study. (e.g. software programs, languages, time management, people management, research, analytics, project management, etc.)

Strengths are personal attributes that you have cultivated over time. (e.g. flexibility, integrity, positive attitude, willingness to learn, dependability, friendliness, persistence, etc.)

NOTE: Employers look for more than just technical skills from candidates so it is important to identify and articulate both your “soft” and “hard” skills.

- Hard skills are the specific, teachable, abilities and knowledge areas require for positions. They are fact-based and can be defined and measured.
- Soft skills include the personal, relational and behavioral attributes that allow you to thrive in the workplace. They are subjective and often times situational
